Legislature. But he, and such as he, are trying to lull the people to sleep by telling them that they are assured of the benefits of competition between the Seaboard and the Southern. Where is the competition? Where are the vast numbers of tax-payers and freight-payers who are to get the benefit of this competi tion, even if it existed? There are just two interior towns in the State, Raleigh and Charlotte, where there is a sembbuilding has been the want of correct lance of competition. Every other and scientific knowledge as to how to town and neighborhood is at the build the best road for the least money. mercy of the owners of the highway of every bushel of grain, every pound of howlers are yelling about the benefits to the reople of railroad competition.

Oh! they are beauties. There is no real railroad competition at Raleigh or Charlotte, or anywhere else. At such so-called competitive points, the people are plundered by the pool agreements, a scheme of combining against customers that is precisely equivalent to the old common law crime of forestalling. Forestalling was a combination of those who have something to sell, for the purpose of agreeing upon a price and taking nothing less than that. In other words, a trust, and so we have a railroad trust, even where there is a pretence of competition. This railroad trust is not only the product of railroad combines, but it is the child of Federal usurpation. As was pointed out by Governor Federal courts have actually decided that they will not permit any real competition between railroads. The law that they expound, commands cutthroat competition among farmers and producers and prohibits it among

All the talk about healthy railroad competition is a fraud. There is no hope for the reduction of the tolls exacted by the highways except in political regulation. Until the country comes to government ownership of its highways, the only hope of the property holders and producers is in the Railroad Commissions. And the the only hope there is in getting men magnates and overseers.
